others, Committee of the Republican National Convention.

GENTLEMEN: In reply to your official communication of June 17, by which I am informed of my nomination for the office of President of the United States by the Republican National Convention at Cincinnati, I accept the nomination with gratitude, hoping that, under Providence, I shall be able, if elected, to execute the duties of the high office as a trust for the benefit of all the people.

I do not deem it necessary to enter upon any extended examination of the decreation of principles, made by the con-

The fifth resolution adopted which is of paramount interest. More than forty years ago, a system of making appointments to office grew up, based up on the maxim "To the victors belong the spoils." The old rule—the true rule—that honesty, capacity, and fidelity constitute the only real qualifications for stitute the only real qualifications for the rule of the constraint of the rule of th whenever the two elements mix. This office, and that there is no other claim, gave place to the idea that party services were to be chiefly considered. All parties, in practice, have adopted this system. It has been essentially modified aince its first introduction. It has not, however, been improved.

At first the President, either personally in the property of the property of the property of the property of the president of t is one of the great obstacles to a revival of confidence and husiness, and to a return of prosperity. That uncertainty can be ended in but one way—the remumption of specie payments, but the longer the instability connected with our present money system is premitted to continue, the greater will be the injury inflicted upon our economical interests, and all classes of society.

If elected, I shall approve every appropriate measure to accomplish the desired end, and shall oppose any step backward.

The resolution with respect to the public school system is one which should receive the hearty support of the American people. Agitation upon this subject is to be apprehended, until, by constitutional amendment, the schools are placed beyond all danger of sectarian control or interference. The Republican party is pledged to secure such an amendment.

The resolution of the Convention on the subject of the permanent pacification of JUNIUS.

Prominent Democratic Politician Comes Out for Hayes and Wheeler,

The resolution of the Convention on the subject of the permanent pactification of the country, and the complete protection of all its citizens in the free enjoyment of all their constitutional rights, is timely and of great importance. The condition of the Southern States attracts the attention and commands the sympathy of the people of the whole Union. In their processive recovery from the effects of the war, their first necessity is an intelligent and honest administration of government, which will protect all classes of citizens in all their political and private rights. What the South most needs is peace, and peace depends upon the supremecy of law. Thus we seem to have the Cincinnation of 1876 and the Democratic National Convention of 1876 and the Democratic National Convention of 1886 in entire accord on the staring the staring which will protect all classes of citizens in all their political and private rights. What the South most needs is peace, and peace depends upon the supremary of law. There can be no enduring peace, if the constitutional rights of any portion of the people are habitically disregarded. A division of political parties, resting merely upon distinctions of race, or upon sectional lines, is always unfortunate, and may be disastrous. The whole fare of the South, alike with that of every other part of the country, depends upon the attractions it can offer to labor, to immigration, and to capital. But labor terms will not go, and capital will not be ventured, where the constitution and the laws are set at defiance, and distraction, appreheision, and alarm, take the parts that are new no less than the parts that are new
